At the beginning of the season, these same Coats bring $10 and could not be soid for less. Now things are slow in the windesale market and the manufacturers welcome orders, even at reductions, rather than be idle. These conditions work in your favor.

As to the Coats—there are about 75 of them, a very small lot, when such prices prevail. Make the most of this opportunity, and be here early Monday after one of these coats. They are made of good light an covert cloth, hip length, close fitting back with belt and have no collars; $1) for $7.50,

Good Company.

One way to make a good and happy life lies in this; "I am a companion of all them that fear thee." To forsake the cvil doer, and seek the company of his good; to turn the back upon the wicked and follow the steps of the righteous. This is clevating and sweetening; this is the climbing up into lives of purity and joy. How much more must it be true when one can say: "I have set the Lord always before me." I will have for my friend and daily companion Him who lived the truest and purest life ever lived on earth, and who still comes to walk with us in the way, and then make Himself known to us in the breaking of bread.—Central Presbyterian.

Can Friendship be Forced?

"Triendship cannot be forced" is a common expression. What does one mean who says this? Usually that we cannot force other people to be our friends. One who uses the phrase in that way has missed the very idea of friendship. Friendship has nothing to do with another person's attitude toward ourselves. We can be friends to those who hate us. The test of friendship rests solely with ourselves. In a sense, friendship can be forced, for no birrier can stand against the love of a friend. Life is empty without friendship its blessings are open to all who will accept its high responsibilities.—Sunday School Times. a smile. Fulfilling the Law.

Fulfilling the Law.

Love is the greatest thing that Gonean give us, for Himself is love, and it is the greatest thing we can give to God, for it will also give ourselves and earry with it all that is ours. The apostle calls it the bond of perfection; it is the old, and it is the new; it is the great commandment, and it is all the commandments, for it is the fulfilling of the law.—Southern, Churchman.

Education and Edification.

We are beginning to see that the "all things" of the great and last command of our Lord includes equipment for service as well as enlistment for service. That shallow and superficial notion that it is the business of organized Christianity simply to make proclamation of the gospel and pass on is inadequate and bolited.

Vardaman's Reply.

A special from Jackson, Miss., says:
The administration's reply to the strictures of the press and people in regard to the telegram sent by Governor Vardaman to President Francis was made public to-day. The reply is in the shape of a communication which is addressed to the editor of the Jackson Evening News, and which appears in that pusper to-day. It is signed by Gerrard Harris, a warm personal friend of the Governor, and around the State House it is generally understood that the communication is the administration's answer to the criticisms of the Governor. The following is the communication:
"Editor News: It seems to me you are unduly sovere in your condemnation of unduly sovere in your condemnation of the message sent by Governor Vardaman to President Francis, of the expesition, relative to Theodore Rosseveit's gracious appreciation of the Mississippi exhibit and building.

"There was no discourtesy to Presibuilding.

"There was no discourtesy to President Francis. A calm perusal of the message shows that, but when Governor Varidaman thought of the descrating spectacle of Theodore Roosevolt entering the replica of the home of Jefferson Davis, that gentle old man whom he defamed, about whom he told deliberate untruths in his published works, to whom, when the poor old Mississippian, ex-President of the Confederacy, after being called by this same Roosevelt 'the arch traitor,' 'chief repudiationist,' one of-a, 'brutal race,' ventured to call Roosevelt's attention in courteous terms to the glaring missistement as to his being a 'repudiationist,' received a typewritten communication, not even signed, not even addressed as an ordinary letter, as follows. "Theodore Roosevelt desires no communication with Jefferson Davis."

"I say, when Governor Vardaman recalled all this and thought of the blatant Roosevelt stamping through the rooms ballowed by the memories of the heart munication with Jefferson Davis.

"I say, when Governor Vardaman receiled all this and thought of the blatant Roosevelt stamping through the rooms hallowed by the memories of the heart of the Confederacy, who, when feeble, weak, old and broken in heart and spirits, he had graulitously insulted and wantonly defamed, it was natural and human, as a Mississippian who resented the desceration, to have given expression to something not exactly complimentary to the Rough Rider.

"True, the Governor could have remained slient, but after Roosevelt has insulted the South by saying that the Southerners have a strong strain of brutality in their nature'; after dining with a 'nigger' as a wanton deflance to our traditions; after forcing another 'nigger' down the threats of the Charleston people as collector and representative of the port; after punishing a whole community in this State for the lawless acts of a few men; after offering every mulicious wrong he could to our most illustricous citizen—the President of the Completer-Roosevelt graciously consents to approve of our exhibit made at the exposition, through our Executive, are we to ordwl to the feet of this arrant charlatan, and there lick the boot which has time and again spurned us?

"Not if the southern nature is unchanged. The Governor might have caroled joyfully over this distinguishing mark of humortality conferred upon us, and those who are 'ever ready to crook the presunt hinges of the knies that tirift may follow fawning,' would have coosed sweetly about his 'broad statesmanship,' and the 'material prosperity' which Teddy's dentiforious smile would confer upon us, and those who would defame an old man like Jefferson Davis is unworthy of respect; if he is shown his wrong, and refuses to right it, he merits contempt; if he pilos Ossa on Pellon in the shape of further wrong, he is infamous. These things Theodore Roosevelt has done. He has repeatedly shown that he has no further use for us than he had for Jefferson Davis, and under the dreumstances I do not beli
